CONSUMMATION OF 3-YEAR PROGRAM OF BIG IMPROVEMENTS FOR BORO' MARKED BY ANNUAL MUNICIPAL DINNER HERE

Heads of the Various Departments Give Review of Accomplishments During the Year 1927 — Great Progress Has Been Made — Plans for the Present Year Are Outlined and Co-operation of Property Owners and Residents Is Solicited.

NATIVE TOWNSMAN RETURNS AFTER 50-YEAR ABSENCE, ACCOMPANYING SON, WHO IS GUEST OF HONOR AND SPEAKER OF THE OCCASION

Hon. Charles A. Waters, Secretary of Labor and Industry, Stresses the Importance of Fire Prevention and General Safety Principles — Shows What Progress State Has Made in These Activities.

Consummation of a three-year program in development of major improvements and public utilities of Bristol Borough was marked last night at the annual gathering of members of the official family of the Borough. The affair, as in former years, took place in the Community House and was attended by approximately 140 persons. The Hon. Charles A. Waters, Secretary of Labor and Industry of Pennsylvania, was the guest of honor of the evening. He was accompanied by his father, Daniel F. Waters, a native Bristolian.

Following the serving of a delightful menu those in charge of the municipal departments gave a resume of what had been accomplished in the past 12 months. And in instances where the accomplishments of their particular departments did not measure up to a standard which they, themselves, had fixed at the outset of their terms and for which they had perhaps been criticised took solace in the cryptic quotation from Abraham Lincoln on the menu card, headed: "Consolation to office holders," which read:

"If I were trying to read, much less answer all the attacks on me, this shop might well be closed to any other business. I do the best I know how, the very best I can; and I mean to keep on doing it to the end. If I end brings me out all right, what is said against me will not amount to anything. If the end brings me out all wrong, ten angels swearing I was right would make no difference."

Burgess Clifford L. Anderson presided as toastmaster and extended a hearty and cordial greeting to those assembled. He requested Howard E. James, superintendent of education, to respond to the toast, "What Are the Public Schools Doing for the Boys and Girls Who Cannot Go Higher, But Must Accept the High School Course As Their Finished Education?"

Mr. James said that the topic assigned to him made him immediately think of the crafts and industry, and with that in mind he proceeded to gather information concerning both vocational and co-operative vocational courses that are being conducted in other cities of the state.

He read a questionnaire which he had mailed to a number of cities and gave the answers received. Then by way of comparison he told of the vocational work done in the Bristol schools last year and what was being accomplished this term. He showed that it was not the aim of the school authorities advocating vocational training to neglect the cultural side of education and summed it up in this expression: "The aims of general education ought to prepare for the functions common to all people; health conservation, citizenship, leisure, parental responsibility, ethical character, together with the knowledge and attitude necessary to carry civilization forward."

"Are the High Honors Attached to the Chairmanship of the Tree Commission, Commensurate with the Onerous Duties Which You Are Called Upon to Perform," was the topic assigned to Thomas Scott, the one lone member of that Commission.

Mr. Scott in a humorous way told of the comprehensive survey which had been made of the trees of the town. He said there had been some pruning and some removal and he pleaded all present to consider themselves members of this Commission.

He concluded by mentioning the progress made in paved streets, building of bridges, removal of overhead wires and the development of public utilities, police and fire departments.

Daniel F. Waters, a native Bristolian and father of the guest of honor of the evening, was called upon and in his response told of his early boyhood days here. He expressed the utmost pleasure at returning after an absence of nearly 50 years and said that those days which as a boy he spent here in Bristol, were very pleasant ones to recall. "I marvel at your progress since I left," he said. The speaker recalled numerous incidents in his early life here such as crawling through the stand-pipe as it lay upon the ground previous to erection. He recalled his school days here and in general spoke of Bristol as he recalled it back in 1881 when he left to reside in Philadelphia where he has lived ever since.

The guest of the evening, the Hon. Charles W. Waters, secretary of Labor and Industry of Pennsylvania, was then presented by the toastmaster and in a clear and concise way told of "The State's Work for Fire Prevention."

The speaker began with the reorganization of the department with which he is connected and explained the functioning of the inspection bureau. He told how it had been realized that it was a matter of co-operation of groups which would advance the safety of the citizens of the Commonwealth and that accident prevention had been stressed. "In an 11 month period in 1927 the number of accidents in the State were reduced by 20,000. I have noticed that the larger corporations and the larger plants are the ones wherein safety and accident prevention are stressed the most."

Mr. Waters told of the "Fire and Panic Act" passed at the last session of the Legislature and that now it is fire prevention rather than fire protection. He told of his visit during the afternoon to the municipal building and said that he would rank the fire fighting equipment found there the best in the State, not even excluding the larger cities. "I am going to carry back with me to Harrisburg what you have done here and I know that it will give us encouragement and when I visit other communities throughout the State I am going to tell them what you have done here. The question of safety is a pressing one."

The health of the Borough was dwelt upon by the president of the Health Board, Dr. Charles S. Abbott. He called to mind the absence of any serious epidemic during the year and recited the safeguards taken in keeping pure the food and water supply. Jacob C. Schmidt, Sr., president of Council, in his observations as the head of that body, said that in accepting the honor conferred upon him that while his interests of the Third Ward would have his most earnest support and attention, yet as a member of Council he was obliged to render service not in the interest alone of the district which he represented but of the entire borough, and not for one set of men or particular influence but of all of the people.

James L. McGee, chief of the Consolidated Fire Department, responded to the toast, "Our New Fire Department." He briefly sketched the organization of the new department and told what had been accomplished up to this time. He enumerated the equipment in the department and said that it was the best and most modern obtainable.

W. Ray Smith, commander of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, was the official representative of that body and spoke in its behalf. He told of the work in the interest of the disabled veterans, war orphans and the dependents of veterans. Locally he told of the work of the Legion, such as sponsoring the playground movement, assisting with the boy scouts, Community Christmas tree and said that it is the desire of the Post here to inaugurate a series of meetings for men each Sunday afternoon beginning in April. "Our poster put up last Saturday afternoon by Burgess Anderson, Chief of Police McGuckin and Justice of Peace Edward Lynn, has on it this slogan: 'American Legion—In Peace as in War—We Serve.' This is our motto and we are still ready to serve this community."

"Past Achievements—What of the Future?" was the toast to which Joseph R. Grundy responded. Mr. Grundy stated that a resume of the accomplishments of the Borough during the last year had been set forth in the annual message of the Chief Burgess. But by way of summing up what had been done here he enumerated these things which Council through its various committees had completed.

Buckley street, he stated, had been rebuilt throughout its entirety as had also a portion of Washington street. That section of Radcliffe street extending from Adams Hollow Creek to the county line had been rebuilt with the aid of the State and 2,600 feet of storm water sewer constructed so as to properly drain the roadway. The speaker referred to the period just closed and of which the heads of the various departments were giving an account, as being the most constructive in the town's history. He said that perhaps some of the critics would claim that this was attributed to the fact and had been brought about through adverse criticism. This, however, he denied, saying that like everything else there was psychology in the affairs of a municipality and the time had arrived for certain improvements to be made in the Borough.

The carrying of an $80,000 bond issue in all districts of the Borough, and the reassessment of the town provided an increased borrowing capacity on the part of the Borough on an increase of $2,000,000 in assessed valuation. "The State," Mr. Grundy said, "contributed $170,000 toward the construction of concrete roadways in Bristol; the county gave $30,000; and the Canal Company, $15,000 toward the Beaver Bridge. Then through the system of retirement of various bond issues of the Borough, another $20,000 was provided. During the last three years there was expended on Borough improvements approximately $355,000 of which the Borough contributed $140,000, the balance coming from outside sources.

"There are 15 miles of improved highways in the Borough and in fact there are only one and one-half miles of roadways which are not improved. We have approximately five miles of concrete streets. Then there is the sewer system and the water system." Mr. Grundy described the three separate and distinct pumping units at the water plant and told how all emergencies had been provided for. "One thing," he said, "has not been accomplished as yet, the opening of Trenton avenue into the Sixth Ward. Two of the adjoining three property owners have agreed to go along with the Borough but the remaining one has been obstinate. We are about to have a jury of view named and take this property through legal processes of the courts."

Thus completing a summary of what had been done the speaker then (Continued on Page Four)

CIVIC LEADERS WILL HONOR "LONE EAGLE"

St. Louis Folks Welcome Hero After Good-Will Flight

TO REST FOR A WHILE

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 15 (INS)—Back home with all but a few formalities of welcome over, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today was to go through one more festive occasion, a chamber of commerce luncheon, and then have the pleasure of being a private citizen again until next Monday when he will return to his old air mail route for two days.

Business and civic leaders will honor him at this afternoon's luncheon and to make him feel really at home he will be the only speaker and the affair will be entirely informal.

After yesterday's tumultuous welcome from a hundred thousand school children lined along the Mississippi River levees and another hundred thousand grownups who were just as unrestrained as the younger Lindbergh admirers, Lindy could have not the slightest doubt that he was "home."

Lindbergh today refrained from any comment on the plan of Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis to have him cease "dangerous flying" but his friends declared no answer would be made to Davis' statement unless Davis took up the matter personally with the "Lone Eagle." Judging by Lindbergh's statement since arriving here he does not consider any flying by an airworthy machine and capable pilot to be dangerous.

Without mentioning Davis' statement, Lindbergh declared he did not consider he had been doing any "stunt" flying. He regards his flights as carefully prepared ordinary business with only a minimum danger.

"It may be that I will do some experimental flying in the future and that sort of work sometimes is dangerous," Lindbergh declared. "But aviation as a whole has passed the experiment stage and I do not believe my flying can be classed that way now."

Then he smiled. "But for the present there is no reason for worry," he added. "From now until next week I am in retirement. I need rest in private life and am going to try to get it."

TWO LECTURES TO BE GIVEN HERE TONIGHT

Speakers To Address Gatherings in Presbyterian and Methodist Churches

TO USE ILLUSTRATIONS

Eskimo, dog teams, snow shoes, will be much in evidence in the pictures Henry W. Greist, M. D., shows tonight at the Presbyterian Church at 7:45 p. m.

Dr. Greist, with an exceptional medical and surgical training, heeded the call of the far North and, at the cost of much financial sacrifice, went up to the Presbyterian hospital at Point Barrow, Alaska, as the physician in charge.

Point Barrow is way up on the Arctic Ocean, the point from which Commander Byrd started to make his epochal flight over the North Pole. Dr. Greist administered to the physical and spiritual needs of the natives for 1000 miles along the Arctic coast. He has an unusually large and rich experience with Eskimo habits and customs, and has had many thrilling experiences on land and frozen sea. These he will tell about and illustrate with pictures.

Dr. Greist has a great story to tell and gives it with humor and appeal that holds the listeners' interest. Everybody is invited to attend.

Tonight in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Cedar and Mulberry streets, there will be an extraordinary and very special program given when Prof. Burton L. Rockwood will give his lecture: "Human Dividends."

Prof. Rockwood has been called the master silver-tongued orator and he delivers a most interesting illustrated address. Newspaper comment says "He has no superior on the American platform."

As an extra attraction there will be offered the special motion picture, "A Message From Gallies."

The lecture will begin at eight o'clock and the public is cordially invited to attend the meeting.

HIGH SCHOOL LOSES BY MARGIN OF ONE POINT

Hatfield Guard Tosses Ball Which Flops In in Last Three Seconds

FINAL SCORE 27 TO 26

By T. M. Juno

With three seconds to play, Zepp, guard, of Hatfield, shot the ball which hit the rim of the basket and then fell in as the final whistle blew. This field goal spelled defeat for Bristol High, last night and the visitors won by the score of 27 to 26.

Bristol played a fine defensive game and had excellent passing, but messed too many shots from under the basket. Hatfield did not show the one-man power as shown on their own floor. Most of Hatfield's scores were made by long shots.

Strumfels was high scorer for the locals, sinking eight field and two foul shots for a total of eighteen points. Captain Opdyke played a wonderful defensive game besides scoring six points. De Risi, Greene, Wankle, Schiffer and Wright played exceptionally good.

Captain Didden, of the visitors, though guarded heavily, managed to score a trio of field goals in each half. Zepp and Hartman also played good for Hatfield. The game was nicely refereed by Barfoot, of Franklin and Marshall. The defeat was the second in row for the Cardinal and Gray squad. Coach Townsend intends to put the boys through hard practice for the rest of the week in preparation of the "Booster" game with Bensalem this Friday.

BRISTOL SCOUTS LEAD IN AWARDS AND IN NUMBERS

Local District Heads All The Others in Bucks County

TROOP 5 HAS BANQUET

Championship Scout Meets Will Be Discussed At Rally

In summing up the activities of the past week among the Boy Scouts in the Council Districts of Bristol, Delaware Valley, Doylestown and North Penn Valley it is found there were honors conferred on one life scout, six star scouts, 107 merit badges awarded, 27 first class scouts, and 77 second class scouts.

The Bristol District led in securing the most awards as well as the life scout award which was won by John Johnson, County Troop No. 2, Bristol Troop No. 1, Norman C. Hetherington, scoutmaster.

Though the Bristol District led in the greatest number and highest awards at the last Court of Honor its supremacy is being strongly challenged in all of the other three districts. In totaling the number present at the various Court of Honor it is found that the Delaware Valley District leads with over 525 present, the county total being approximately 1235 with the Doylestown District having a night of very bad weather.

Great interest is being shown in all troops for active advancement, and a greater understanding of "What Is Scouting" is being shown by many individuals.

The annual banquet of Troop No. 5, Bristol, was held at the Harriman Men's Club hall last Saturday evening. The dinner was served in conjunction with the supper being given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Harriman Methodist Church, which is also the sponsoring institution of the scout troop. The toastmaster was Scoutmaster Harrison C. Leake, and among the invited guests was the troop committee and Scout Executive William F. Livermore, all of whom spoke. Harry R. Ranck, chairman of the troop committee, presented to Theodore Smith a special gift in view of his having been the "most valuable member" of Troop No. 5 during the past year.

Scout Executive Livermore congratulated the troop on the awards they had received at the Court of Honor, told them of their opportunity to make Troop No. 5 shine in the coming Scout meet, and offered a suggestion that a rising vote of thanks be extended to their Scoutmaster, Mr. Leake, for his sacrifice, interest and desire to make Troop No. 5 a standard Bucks Council Troop. Cheers were immediately given for Mr. Leake which by their volume indicated the love and esteem with which he is held in his work with the scouts of Bristol No. 5.

Among the items of interest to be discussed at the February bi-monthly meeting of the Bucks County Council Executive Board at the Doylestown Inn, tomorrow, will be the championship scout meets during March, the Philadelphia Boy Scout Camporee, the status of the finances in regards to the communities comprising the Council, the county Scout monthly, a yearly troop scribe contest, the organization of the Seascout Ship "Robert Morris" of Morrisville, the county scout leader's training course starting during the month of March, an extensive report of the camp committee in regards to the purchase of camp, 1928 program, and the camp rally. Plans will also be discussed as to the annual council meeting which will be held at the Court House, Doylestown, Thursday, March 22nd. The business will be concluded with the selection of a nominating committee to report at the council annual meeting.

Group 2 is composed of the bankers in Bucks, Berks, Schuylkill, Montgomery, Chester and Delaware counties.

Lester D. Thorne, treasurer of the Bristol Trust Company, was elected a member of the Executive Committee of Group 2.

EXTENDING RADIO CONTROL

Congress has passed legislation extending the life of the Federal Radio Commission another year.

A year ago it was believed that only twelve months would be needed in which to create order out of the chaos that then existed in the air. The newly-formed commission went to work with high hopes. As the months passed it was found that radio control is more complicated than was originally believed. The commission has done its best and has accomplished much, but it has not evolved a broadcasting system that lives up to the name.

The commission has had a year of experience and, because of this, stands better equipped to deal with the problem than any other agency. This was sufficient reason for congress to pass a simple amendment to the radio act extending the life of the commission and making such other changes as the commission deemed necessary at this time.

Radio is young and radio control is but a mere infant, both of which command congress to proceed slowly and cautiously in passing legislation relating to either. There is a field for much good and a possibility of doing great harm.

It is not necessary that the whole complex problem be solved in a day or even in a year. The radio public is satisfied with the progress already made in radio control and will be content if future progress continues at the same pace. Too drastic legislation this early in the game may retard effective control, if not destroy all the good already accomplished.

A NEW FIELD FOR PSYCHOLOGY

At a time when discussions on the relationship between parent and child are much heard the new subject of "psychology of parenthood" should yield a faggot or two to help the blaze of conversation around the hearth.

The unfortunate parent is always a safe target, and one takes it the younger generation will heartily second the warnings of parenthood psychologists to the heads of families to give youngsters more rope, to bear contradiction meekly, to avoid showing off superior wisdom and in general, to encourage the juniors to develop their own views, lines of action and personalities.

But the parent has been told this so often that his Victorian domination of the home has by now been effectually undermined. His morale is not what it was. Already he puts up meekly with what his own father would have termed preposterous license in the blessed name of "self-determination."

Is the wretched parent to have no self-expression at all? Is he seriously expected to believe that the more assiduously he vegetates in a corner of the drawing room, responding diffidently only when spoken to and smothering all differences of opinions under a cloak of superficial harmony, the better will be the effect on the family? It may be so but, in the face of the steady stream of chastisement that nowadays plays upon him, he will be apt to think that it is high time he took a stand before his spirit is completely broken.

That last supposedly inalienable right has now been taken from the parent by the new school of psychology. "Superficial harmony" between parents must be religiously maintained lest it crop out in their offspring in the form of "superficial discord" in play.

SYNOPSIS
Myra Martin, secretary to Leonard Gilbert, a divorce lawyer to whom she is engaged, discovers that her sister, Helene, is in a situation with a man named Sheldon. Myra, disguised as a maid, goes to give up her sister, and is caught by Nita, but escapes unharmed. Myra, disguised as a maid, goes to give up her sister, and is caught by Nita, but escapes unharmed. Chapter XIV—Continued

"Why, she phoned Mr. Sheldon this morning," Nita went on quite eager to tell all her news to anyone at all—just so she could talk and get it told. "And Bette had the wires 'tapped.' She speaks in a very soft, cooing voice—can you imagine it! She phoned him herself, and as soon as she said: 'Hello,' he recognized her voice, and he called her: 'Helene, darling.' O, Bette heard the entire thing. And Mr. Sheldon asked this person to come to his apartment at two thirty this afternoon. Moreover, his parting words were: 'I'll see that we won't be disturbed.' Mrs. Sheldon laughed sarcastically. 'Disturbed—O, no!'

"Well, that should help you clear up matters," Myra was keeping hold of herself with tremendous effort, and trying to determine what she should do. If she could only get rid of this visitor and think. She looked at her watch. It was almost two, now. But Mrs. Sheldon was talking, talking interminably. "Yes, of course it's so much better to catch the person and have her identified," Mrs. Sheldon was saying. "It makes it so much more easy when the case comes up. You have tangible proof, I believe, don't you?"

"I—I really wouldn't know," Myra answered, scarcely thinking of what she was saying.

"Well, I'd rather have it happen this way, I know that. And after all the weeks we've spent trying to get something on Mr. Sheldon—it really seems to have worked out quite all right, doesn't it?"

Myra nodded her head. "Are you going to the apartment, too?" she asked.

"I certainly am. I'm going to confront the woman myself and tell her exactly what I think of her." "O, I see," Bette little Helene. What would she do when brought face to face with a woman like this. She'd give herself away immediately. Myra doubted Sheldon's ability to protect her against the fury of his wife—even if he wanted to, which, perhaps, he didn't—or didn't care one way or the other. She must try to get hold of Helene—stop her from going. She must do something to avert the wrath of Mrs. Sheldon, and to save Helene's recent marriage from the rocks. But first she must get Mrs. Sheldon out of the office. She looked at her watch again.

"I don't want to hurry you, Mrs. Sheldon," she said as sweetly as she could, "and of course you're quite welcome to stay here as long as you please. But if you're going to find your correspondent—well, it's about two o'clock now. I just thought that perhaps in your excitement you hadn't noticed the time." "O, I hadn't! Thank you so much," Mrs. Sheldon began drawing her wrap about her and buttoning it. "I didn't know it was nearly so late. And I've got to meet Bette, too. I left him off someplace for some lunch—that can eat more often and more times than anyone I've ever known. Promised him I'd pick him up at two o'clock. Thank you for remind me. I'm so careless about time, anyhow," she was still talking. "Well, it's two now," Myra prodded her. "Yes, yes. Well, I'm off. Wish me luck, my dear." She hurried to the door. Myra rose. "Indeed I do. Good luck—and—good-bye. I suppose I'll hear what happens, later." "You will—never fear. You've been so nice to listen to me. And thank you—O, tell Mr. Gilbert I may be back later this afternoon." "All right. Goodbye." When the door had closed after Mrs. Sheldon, Myra rushed back to her desk and seized the phone. She waited impatiently, jiggling the hook up and down. At last the voice of the operator, and she gave the number of her own apartment. If she could only reach Helene before she started for Sheldon's and tell her what had happened. Surely Helene would listen to her this time. She must find her, and warn her.

Long, dull ringings were the only things she could hear. She waited—waited, drumming with her fingers on the desk top; tapping her foot impatiently. Then the voice of the operator: "Sorry, but they do not answer."

Quick! She must try Sheldon's home. Perhaps he hadn't left yet. She found his number in the book and called, but by one of the servants she was informed that Mr. Sheldon had gone out and had left no message. His apartment! She knew where it was—the address was not in the book. It was a private line, and the operator would refuse to give her that number. There was only one thing left to do. She must go to Sheldon's apartment herself.

Leonard would be there—Nita—Helene! All of them. And Nita would accuse Helene before everyone. And Leonard would find out about it. And Nita would publish it. And Helene would lose Ralph. And everything would be in a frightful mess. What would Leonard say when he saw her there. She must reach the apartment before Leonard or Nita, either one, got there.

She snatched her hat from the rack and jammed it down on her head. She pushed her papers to one side and weighted them down. She flew out through the outer door calling to the switchboard operator as she went past. "I'll be back in about an hour. Very important engagement." She waited impatiently for the elevator, and then, at last on the ground floor, she hurried to the street and around the corner, where she had parked her car. She jumped in, started her engine, released the brakes, and was off, disregarding all speed laws.

CHAPTER XV

In his studio apartment Sheldon walked up and down, smoking, and awaiting the arrival of Helene. He looked at his watch. Two fifteen. She'd be there almost any minute, now. He was anxious to hear what had happened on Saturday night, and more anxious to see the girl. He was rather surprised that she had called, but he had, more or less, expected it. Women usually called him. Well, they could spend an afternoon here undisturbed. He had dismissed his valet, and everything was in readiness.

Indeed, the "studio" was usually in readiness. Sheldon had taken it because of its quietness, and the fine arrangement of the rooms, and only the chosen few knew of its existence. He reserved it for his smaller parties and a tete-a-tete now and again. The main room was a huge place arranged comfortably with large, easy chairs, lounges, and small tables for the convenience of cigarette trays and drinks. A staircase led to a series of four upstairs rooms, all opening out onto a balcony. Off the living room was a breakfast room, and off that, a kitchen. An ideal "studio" apartment.

Helene had never been there before, but Sheldon had often told her about it, and asked her to come. Now, at last, she would be there—and probably in a very affable frame of mind, he decided, because of the way in which she had disappointed him on Saturday night. He wondered whether she knew of her sister's visit; whether Myra had kept it to herself. He decided in favor of the latter idea, as it was not exactly a story to broadcast, thanks to his own efforts.

The house phone rang. Sheldon threw his cigarette into the fireplace and answered. "Yes? . . . O, yes, Helene, come right up." He put up the phone and opened the door. In a few moments he could hear her footsteps echoing down the tiled hallway. And then Helene appeared. "My darling, I'm so glad to see you," Sheldon drew the girl inside and attempted to kiss her. Laughing, she evaded him, but she turned softly languorous eyes in his direction. (To be continued)

Consummation of 3-Year Program of Big Improvements for Boro' Marked By Annual Dinner Here

(Continued from Page One) turned his attention to those things contemplated in the future. "We are now passing into a period where we hope to improve our housekeeping and to increase the efficiency and economy of administering the affairs of the borough," he said.

Special attention was called by the speaker to the condition of the sidewalks which he said he hoped every property owner would endeavor to improve. He explained the long and complicated legal steps necessary for the borough to compel the property owner to improve the sidewalks. "New street signs have arrived and just as soon as weather permits these will be placed in the Sixth Ward where the streets have never been properly marked. Those in the other sections of the town will be gone over and repaired and re-arranged. The streets in the Sixth Ward where property owners have so willingly cooperated in the placing of curbs and gutters will be given attention when the weather permits and Beaver street in the Fourth Ward will be entirely rebuilt."

Taking the subject of tax collection the speaker said that out of a total of 6,500 taxables nearly 2,000 did not pay their borough tax. Mr. Grundy stated that his remarks should not be construed as criticism of the tax collector, because, he said that Bristol is far better off in this respect than any other town of which he knew and that a larger percentage of taxes were collected here than in many of the other communities throughout the state. But he decried the fact that one out of every four of the taxables should be willing to enjoy the facilities of the town and yet refuse to pay their proportionate share of the cost. "It is surprising," he said, "that so many should be willing to ride on a free meal ticket."

Fire prevention was another topic touched upon and it was said that 80 per cent. of the fires were preventable. On this subject the speaker urged all to inspect their own premises and avoid those things which might tend to the starting of fires and property loss.

Regret on the part of the toastmaster was expressed at the absence from the gathering of Howard I. James, Borough solicitor, who was reported as being ill, and unable to attend.

The evening was concluded by extending to Mr. Grundy a rising vote of appreciation for his generous gift of the municipal building and its equipment and also for being the host of the evening.

Each guest was presented with a copy of the Borough Year Book, a pamphlet entitled "Decreasing the Fire Hazard," and a brochure entitled "History of Bristol Town Council from the Time of the Incorporation of the Borough to 1928," which was prepared by Doron Green.
